COURT RULING HALTS WORK ON PRESENT BASIS

Upholds Taxpayer On Ground Construction
Work Unsafe

Characterizing the question of safety of the building as the paramount issue at stake, Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy, in a lengthy written opinion handed down Friday afternoon, decided substantially in favor of the plaintiff in the taxpayer's injunction suit brought against The W. H. Howard Construction Co., Columbus, general contractor for the $180,000 centralized school building being erected in Beavercreek Twp. school district.

The decision upholds charges made in the petition filed by Irvan M. Coy on behalf of himself and other taxpayers of the school district, that a part of the present type of construction does not make for a safe school building.

While the contractor, under terms of the ruling, is enjoined in a number of specific instances, from continuing construction work in a manner that allegedly violates the original plans and specifications the question of whether any portion of the structure in its existing incomplete form shall be reconstructed to conform with the contract provisions, is left undecided by the court.

The original petition seeking an injunction, however, did not raise this question for determination, merely asking that the contractor be enjoined from constructing the building "in the way that the contractor is now constructing said building."

Meanwhile, with defense counsel announcing an intention of immediately appealing the decision, it remained a matter for speculation whether construction work on the building will be stopped altogether, or only partly suspended, as at present, pending a final determination of the controversy in the higher courts.

Since the injunction action was brought a few weeks ago, work on that part of the construction in dispute, has been halted. After reviewing the evidence in the case at

SPRINGFIELD MAN ENTERS RACE FOR NOMINATION FOR CONGRESS

E. E. GREINER

E. E. Greiner, Springfield manufacturer and banker, who will seek the Republican nomination to succeed Charles Brand, Urbana, as congressman from the seventh Ohio district, has come into the hall of his principal opponent, L. T. Marshall, Xenia attorney, as he begins fortifying his political fences for the campaign.

With the primary set for May 11, when it will be combined with the presidential preferential primary under the new law, politicians are already becoming active since they are facing that oddity for Ohio—a winter and spring campaign.

Mr. Greiner is a World War veteran and a member of the American Legion, having waived his exemption rights to enter the service although he was married and the father of several children at the time. He saw service with the Army of Occupation, enlisting as a private, was on his way to France when the armistice was signed and

SENATOR SHEPPARD DENIES BEER WOULD RESTORE REVENUES

Says Suggestion Of Block
Revival Of Old Argument

(Editor's note—With the treasury facing deficits of $2,540,000,000 in the next two fiscal years, and President Hoover calling for a billion dollar tax increase, Senator Robert F. Wagner (D) of New York, yesterday advocated the return of beer and wines as a revenue measure and as an aid to unemployment. Today, Senator Morris Sheppard (D) of Texas, co-author of the Eighteenth Amendment, describes Senator Wagner's argument in the following article.)

By Senator MORRIS SHEPPARD

Written for International News Service

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—There is nothing new in the revenue and employment argument for the return of beer. The argument was frequently used by the wets when prohibition was under discussion prior to its final adoption by local jurisdictions, by states, and then by the nation.

The wets said that we could not afford to lose the revenue the nation was deriving from beer or to throw laborers in the beer traffic out of employment. Wet speakers and wet publications repeated this line of talk so often in pre-prohibition days that it was familiar to every voter.

And yet the American people in adopting prohibition rejected this appeal completely and permanently. The American people were not influenced by these contentions, because they knew that the retention of beer trade which constituted by far the greater part of the liquor traffic and the preservation of jobs for the comparatively few workers in the beer industry constituted too dear a price to pay for the revenue and labor involved. For the same reason they will not be influenced by the revival of these ancient and exploded claims, a revival which shows little confidence in the intelligence, morality, and humanity of the American electorate.

To secure a hundred million dollar in revenue from a revived beer trade, for instance, five to ten times that amount would have to be expended for beer. Think of the tremendous sums now going for legitimate needs, for the maintenance of homes and families, which would be diverted to the purchase of beer. Think of the suffering this would impose on women and children, millions of whom are on the verge of destitution.

A voter would have to surrender to common sense and human feeling to bring about such a situation. Think of the enormous amounts of capital now going into legitimate industries, industries producing shelter, clothing, food, education, modern facilities of existence which would be diverted into the production of an intoxicant.

The investment in the brewery business before prohibition amounted to almost eight hundred million dollars. When the employment argument is advanced remember that the beer industry would employ far fewer persons for capital invested than other industries. For instance, in the days of legalized beer the fourteen largest industries of the country employed an average of 506 wage earners for each million dollars invested, while the brewing industry employed 81. Incidentally let me say that the wine industry employed only sixty-eight. Remember further that the legalized beer industry paid only 11 per cent of product value to wage earners while the industries producing things of permanent use paid 22.5 per cent or more than twice as much.

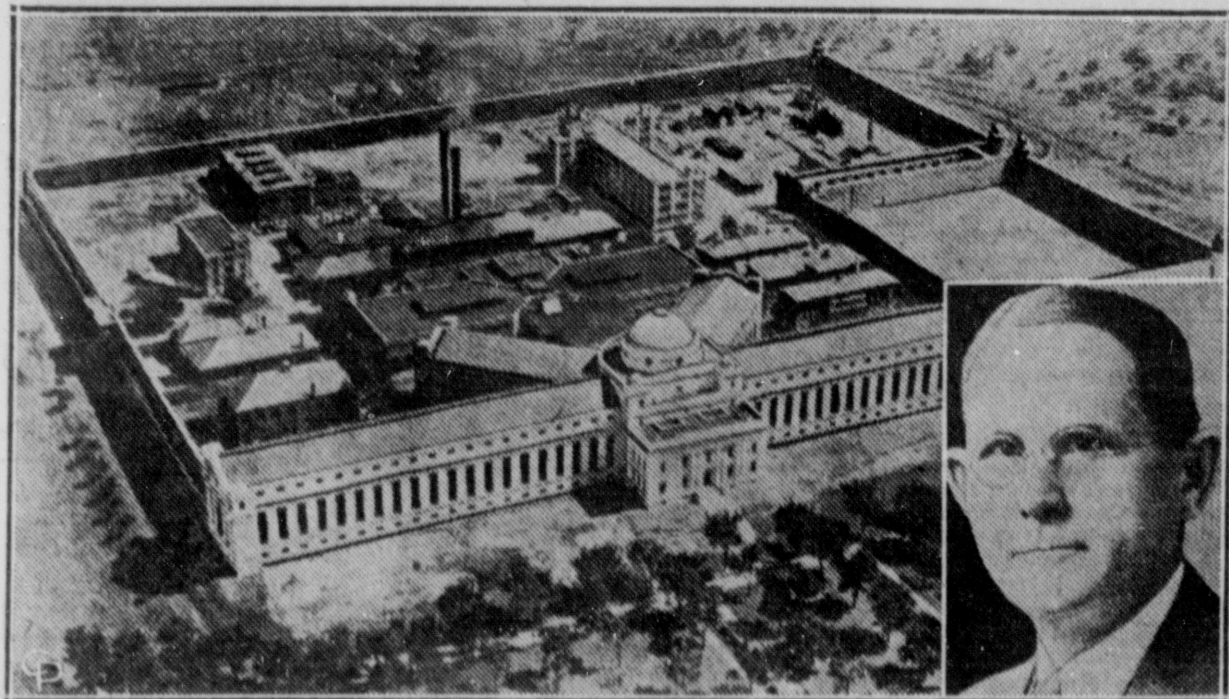

Instead of increasing employment the return of beer would decrease it through the diversion of capital from industries producing legitimate comforts and necessities, thus lessening their output and payrolls.

Let the additional revenue needed for the maintenance of government be obtained by restoring some of the taxes on large incomes which were repealed some years ago. To take it from the backs and homes and families of the already impoverished masses and at the same time to subject them to the temptations and degradations of a revived traffic in intoxicants would be the crime of the centuries.

PRINCE NICHOLAS RENOUNCES ROYAL TITLES AND HONORS

Becomes Commoner For Love; Will Remain
In Bucharest

BUCHAREST, Dec. 12.—Prince Nicholas of Roumania, putting love before royal titles and honors, today renounced his princely prerogatives and reduced himself to the status of a commoner, taking the name of Nicholas Brosteniu.

Under the terms of an agreement with his brother, King Carol, he will be permitted to remain in Roumania as the husband of Mme. Jang Lucia Delet, pretty divorcee with whom he eloped several weeks ago, thereby incurring the wrath of the royal house.

Nicholas will go through another marriage ceremony with Mme. Delet, as the Roumanian supreme court, acting on orders from King Carol, annulled the earlier marriage, performed by the Mayor of Tohan, a small village near Bucharest.

With the union thus legalized, Nicholas will take up residence in his wife's apartment here. He will divide his time between Bucharest and Snaagov, where he maintains a model farm.

Apparently reluctant somewhat toward his brother when he perceived the latter's determination to stand by his wife at all costs, King Carol settled an income of $3,000 a month upon Nicholas.

This, however, will be the only time the former Prince will retain with the royal family.

VIENNA, Dec. 12.—Rumors that the former Mme. Jang Lucia Delet, wife of former Prince Nicholas of Roumania, attempted suicide because of King Carol's objection to the match, were received here today by dispatches from Bucharest stating she had been confined to her apartment for several days.

Nicholas' marital difficulties found their way into Roumanian politics when several thousand persons staged a demonstration in Bucharest in protest against high taxes, shouting "hall to Nicholas." Police waded in with drawn truncheons and dispersed the rioters. Seven persons were seriously injured and twenty suffered minor wounds.

MILK PRICES IN HAMILTON AND BUTLER COUNTIES TO BE PROBED

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 12.—A sweeping investigation of milk prices in Hamilton and Butler Counties, with particular emphasis on possible violation of the Valentine anti-trust law, appeared probable today.

The move for investigation was started following reports that farmers were being organized under an agreement that prevented them from giving away surplus milk.

Zelmer Morgenthau, Butler County prosecutor, indicated today that he would carry his investigation before the grand jury. The Hamilton County inquiry loomed when Albert Niemeyer, president of the Retail Grocers' Association announced he would carry the case to a committee of seven grocers.

Better prices for farmers and lower rates for consumers was the cry giving impetus to the investigation.

"Certain monopolistic organizations" are forcing residents of Butler County to do without milk or to depend upon charity while farmers at the same time are being forced to throw away their surplus milk, Morgenthau charged.

THREE KILLED AND THREE ARE AGAIN JAILED

Seventh Still Free;
Warden Wounded

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Dec. 12.—An ominous tension blanketed the "big house" today. It was the taut calm that followed the federal penitentiary's most violent insurrection marked by the death of three fleeing convicts, the recapture of three others, the abduction and wounding of the warden and the disappearance of a seventh prisoner.

Beneath the still surface of military order official activity seethed as the authorities began gathering up the loose ends of the bloody outbreak. Several mysterious aspects of the prison break remained to be solved, not the least of which were:

- (1) Where and how did the six freedom-seeking convicts obtain the weapons?
- (2) Who shot and killed three of the escaping prisoners in a hotly besieged farmhouse, eight miles from the prison?
- (3) Who shot and wounded Warden Thomas B. White?
- (4) Where is Earl Thayer, the convict who was discovered missing in a checkup after the frustrated break?

The three fleeing convicts, surrounded and captured in a woods, were placed in heavy irons after their return to the prison. The men, Charles Berta, Stanley Brown and Tom Underwood, stubbornly refused in the face of a steady grilling, to reveal the manner in which pistols, shotguns and ammunition were smuggled into them. Nor would they disclose other details of the carefully conceived delivery plot which brought death to their three companions, Will Green, Grover C. Durrill and George Curtis.

Evidence emerging from the investigation thus far points to Green, 32, an Oklahoma City mail robber serving twenty-five years, as the leader and the most desperate of the desperadoes who created a reign of terror throughout the countryside as they fled from the prison trading bullets with pursuing posses.

It was Green who was believed to have shot Warden White when the official made an heroic attempt to wrest a shotgun from the convict's hands. It was Green who dealt out death to his fugitive comrades, Durrill and Curtis, and then destroyed his own life in the besieged farmhouse, according to the theory of Coroner Ted L. Sexton.

After a preliminary examination of the convict trio's bodies, the coroner said all three had been killed by 38 calibre pistol bullets. Durrill and Curtis appeared to have been shot at close range. The wounds were in the ears. But the wound that spelled death to Green was a bullet behind the ear, indicating suicide.

Left by his vicious abductors as dead, Warden White, who played the heroic lead in this drama of turmoil and death, was today reported improved at Cushing Hospital, where he was taken by possemen who found him lying beside the road. An emergency operation

RUM RUNNERS FLEE DESERTING LIQUOR

DELAWARE, O., Dec. 12.—Search was continued throughout this district today for two unidentified rum runners who escaped in a hall of bullets last night from Motorcycle Officer Joe Davis.

Davis apprehended the runners on a road near Delaware and was following their car to police headquarters on his motorcycle when the runners suddenly accelerated their car and dashed away in a mad attempt to escape.

Catching up with the runner's car, Davis forced it off the road. A gun battle ensued during which the rum runners retreated across a field and into a woods where they lost themselves from the officer. Their car carried Tennessee licenses and contained more than fifty gallons of whiskey.

BANDITS BIND AND ROB FOUR

CLEVELAND, Dec. 12.—Binding four employes hand and foot, four gunmen today scooped up approximately $800 from an open safe at the Terminal Wholesale Grocery Co. here and escaped.

Quietly entering the establishment while the employes prepared for the regular Saturday's business, the bandit quartet pulled revolvers from their pockets and pointed them at their victims.

While two stood guard with their pistols poised, the other two tied up the employes and then looted the safe of its contents.

CONSERVATIVE MADE JAPANESE PREMIER; WILL FORM CABINET

Inukai Will Succeed
Wakatsuki; Choice
Of Emperor

TOKYO, Dec. 12.—After a series of conferences between representatives of the throne and leaders of Japan's political parties, Tsuyoshi Inukai, president of the Seiyukai (Conservative) party, tonight was named premier to succeed Reijiro Wakatsuki, resigned.

Inukai will submit his cabinet list to Emperor Hirohito tomorrow. Several candidates are being put forward for the post of foreign minister, the most prominent being KoKi Hirota, now Japanese ambassador to Moscow. M. Yoshida, ambassador to Italy, also is being mentioned for the position. Jotaro Yamamoto, formerly president of the South Manchuria railway, is slated to become finance minister.

Prince Saionji, the distinguished "elder statesman" with whom the emperor traditionally confers in time of a cabinet crisis, was exceedingly pleased with the outcome. Inukai, who is eighty years of age, was equally satisfied, while headquarters of the Seiyukai party was jubilant.

Inukai was called to the imperial palace at 8:00 p. m. and soon afterward official announcement of his designation was made.

The announcement came after Inukai and Wakatsuki had had individual interviews with Prince Saionji, elder statesman, acting in behalf of the throne.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Harry F. Powers, "Blue-beard slayer" of Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, Northboro, Mass., widow he wooed through the mails, will die on the gallows next March 18, between sunrise and sunset.

Sentence of death was pronounced upon the pudgy "mail order Romeo" today by Judge John C. Southern in Harrison County court here when a motion for new trial, filed by J. Ed. Law, defense counsel, was overruled.

Law announced immediately that an appeal would be carried to the circuit court.

PRISONERS CAUGHT AND ARE PUNISHED

CHILLICOTHE, O., Dec. 12.—Having lost their gamble for freedom, four prisoners who fled from Ross County jail yesterday after overpowering the sheriff, were back behind the bars today being punished by solitary confinement and a ration of bread and water.

The prisoners who had hoped to make good their escape were Fred Starr and Lester Semrau of San Francisco, and Venice Myers, federal prisoners and Harley Hiles of Chillicothe, held for the grand jury on charges of burglary.

The quartet succeeded in breaking away from the jail by luring Sheriff T. Ewing Argenbright into the bullpen on the pretext of wanting a window opened. When the sheriff entered the corridor, the prisoners slugged him, stole his keys, and fled.

All were recaptured without resistance a few hours later.

CHILD SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO ON FRIDAY

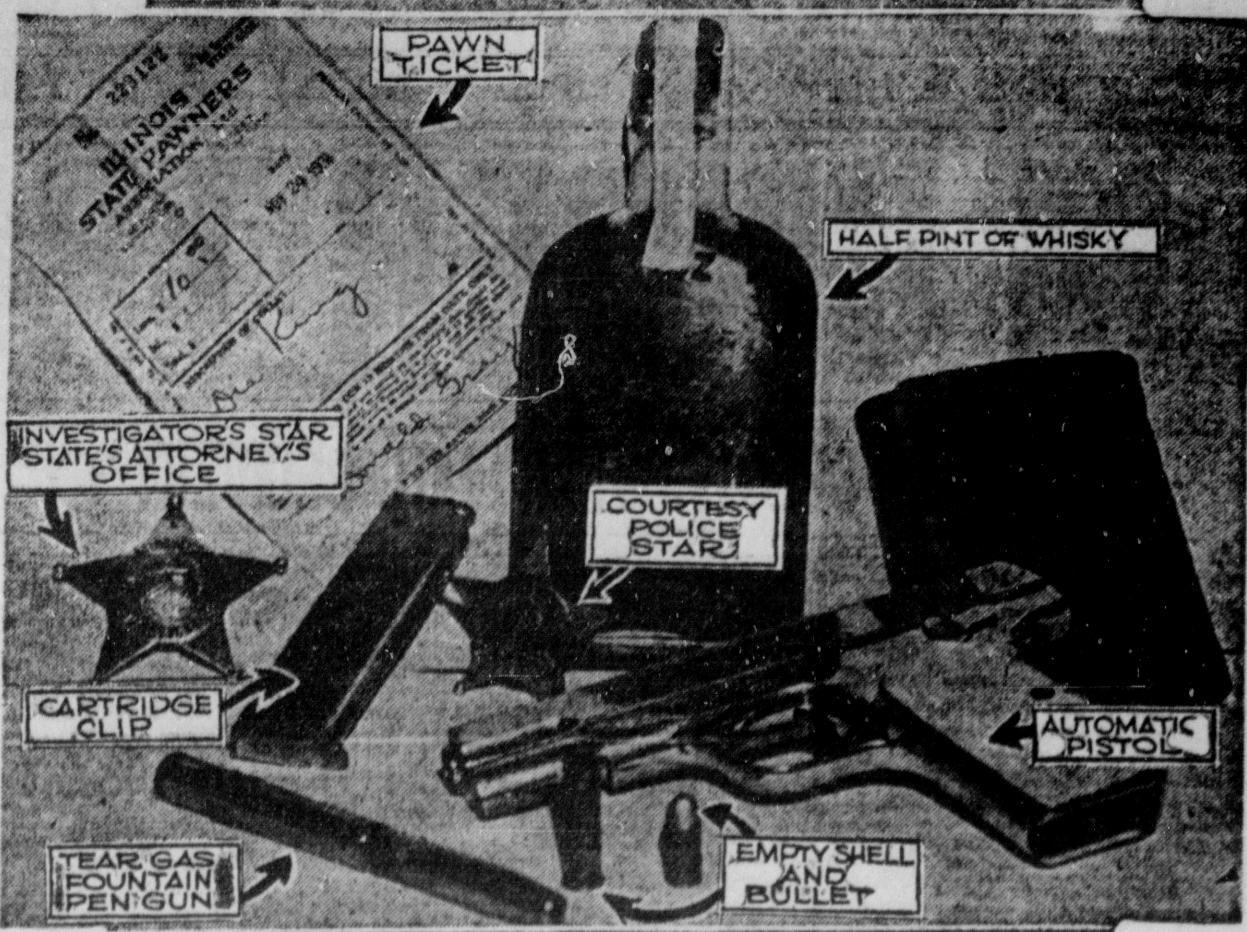

Margaret Slagle, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Slagle, 15 W. Third St., received painful injuries about her head, shoulders and back, when she was struck by an automobile in front of her home Friday at noon.

An automobile had brought the little girl from Miss Viola Orr's kindergarten, which she attends, and had released her across the street from her home. It is thought that she became confused while crossing the street and was struck by an automobile occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Ballard, 8 Elm St., and driven by Mrs. Ballard.

The little girl's injuries consisted of cuts and bruises on her head, face, shoulders, arms and back. She was treated by Dr. A. D. De Haven and was later removed to the offices of Dr. Ashman, Dayton, child specialist, where an x-ray was to be taken to determine the extent of her injuries. She was to be removed to her home here Saturday evening.

Friday was Margaret's fifth birthday and plans were being made for a birthday party at her home Saturday afternoon when she was to entertain her kindergarten classmates.

THREE BOUND OVER HERE FOR CHICKEN STEALING CHARGES

Accused of chicken stealing, two Negroes were held to the grand jury by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Saturday, while a third Negro, implicated in confessions police say have been obtained from the last two, is held in jail and will probably be charged with receiving stolen property.

Pleading guilty to charges of breaking and entering, and bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $500 each, Theodore Stevens, 24, colored, 1104 E. Third St., and Harry Vaughn, 28, colored, 1123 E. Church St., confessed, according to police, the theft of fourteen chickens from the home of George Lee, colored, E. Third St., last Tuesday night.

Their reputed confessions implicated Harold Aiken, 28, colored, E. Church St., who is held in custody for further investigation. Stevens and Vaughn, police assert, said they visited the Lee home twice the same evening, taking four chickens the first time and ten more on the second trip. Aiken, they claim, brought the first four fowl from them for $1.50 and later gave them $2 and a pint of whiskey in exchange for the next ten.

The arrests climaxed an intensive investigation made by police and were made during the last three days. Other suspects, held for questioning, were released after the purported admissions were made by Stevens and Vaughn.

BRIDGE COMPLETED

Contractor Spahr has just completed a much needed improvement on Maple St., a cement bridge across the stream just north of Xenia drive. Chairman of the Street Committee George Troutman, who directed the work instituted a plan of purchasing all the material and letting the work by the day, which resulted in saving the village a considerable sum of money on this contract.

Miss Katherine Shorey, County Librarian of Xenia, paid the local branch a visit Monday and was well pleased with the progress of the work here and informed us that at least twenty-five more volumes per month will be furnished for the Osborn Branch. Mrs. Rhodes is very efficient in her duties and deserves special commendation.

RETURNED HERE TO FACE EMBEZZLEMENT

Waiving extradition proceedings, Harry McKeller, 32, 13 Storrett St., Covington, Ky., arrested at Covington and returned to Xenia Friday night by Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, and Fred Lang, of the Lang Chevrolet Co. In this city, pleaded guilty to embezzlement and was held to the grand jury under $500 bond by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Saturday.

McKeller, it is charged, was employed as a salesman for the local auto agency, and after selling and delivering an auto to a customer, pocketed the purchase money and left the city.

ROBBERY THREAT LEADS TO ARREST

"I'm going to hold somebody up" was the threat credited to a 17-year-old youth, turned down after he had begged for money from the proprietor of a W. Main St. shoe store Saturday morning.

J. E. Watts, chief probation officer of Juvenile Court, who was in the store at the time and heard the boy's exclamation, arrested him and took him to police headquarters, where he is being held for investigation.

The suspect gave his name as Sherman Eytcheson, home at large. Police learned he had been begging in several W. Main St. stores.

ENROLLMENT SHOWS LOSS IN NOVEMBER

Aladdin's Lamp
Is a Fable
...
But the Magic of Natural Gas Is Real

In the distant days of Arabian Nights' fantasies, Aladdin rubbed his lamp, and a Genie appeared, willing to do his every bidding. And today, hundreds of years from that fairyland scene, that Genie works and toils at our bidding. Aladdin, marveling, left his power unnamed. We call it Natural Gas.

You do not "rub a lamp," but you light a Natural Gas burner in your home, and . . . lo . . . a magic thing has happened. A room glows with warmth . . . clothes are dried . . . the food by which you live is cooked deliciously . . . water gushes hot from a faucet to cleanse and soothe your body . . . comforting warmth, automatically controlled in a modern Natural Gas fired furnace, rises to every room in your home. Are these services less wonderful than the strange magic of Aladdin's lamp?

Today everyone can be an Aladdin, everyone can have the services of Natural Gas. Accept these services fully. In a thousand ways Natural Gas is the Magic Lamp of today . . . a servant and a "good genie" . . . a symbol of modern achievement, serving you faithfully, painstakingly, day in and day out.

prevented the amputation of his left arm, physicians said.

Meanwhile, a search was organized for Thayer, the missing convict who is 64 years old. Reinforced by United States army troops from Fort Leavenworth, prison guards were searching the cell blocks for trace of the mysteriously vanished prisoner who was committed to Leavenworth from Oklahoma City along with the three slain convicts. Bloodhounds were sent out in an effort to pick up his trail. Whether or not his escape was part of the delivery conspiracy was undetermined.

The death of the three convicts and the serious wounding of the warden were not the only casualties of the pursuit and gun battles which followed the escaping convict's passage through the prison gates under the shield of Warden White. Minor bullet wounds were also inflicted on Assistant Deputy Warden James Galvin, Prison Guard I. W. Mooney, one of the captured convicts and one of the possemen. Their injuries, however were slight. The prison's normal routine was suspended today, while armed soldiers and guards maintained a strict vigilance. Prisoners were kept in their cells. Work was called off.

At Cushing Hospital nobody was permitted to see or to speak to the wounded warden.

The six convicts who engineered the mutiny were all convicted of mail robbery. The three who perished in the farmhouse were serving twenty-five year terms, and had been in the prison six years and eight months. Bertie, who was wounded before he and his two companions were captured, was serving twenty-five years from San Francisco. Brown, convicted in Fargo, N. D., was serving fifteen years, while Underwood, convicted in Duluth, Minn., was serving a twenty-five year term.

The fleeing convicts split into two parties after they had commandeered three automobiles and one of them had shot Warden White who pleaded for mercy for the occupants of a farmhouse. The prisoners ordered Elizabeth Gates, and her brother Joseph Gates Jr., 13, to accompany them when the warden spoke up in their behalf. A few minutes later he tried to snatch a shotgun and was shot in the ensuing scuffle. The convicts then fled without taking their intended hostages.

When their automobile struck a horse, they began fleeing on foot as a posse of some 200 men closed in on them, pouring lead before them. Three of the escaping prisoners found refuge in the E. C. Salisbury farmhouse, while the remaining three commandeered horses and began galloping through the woods where they were surrounded and captured.

The battle at the farmhouse raged furiously until the shots from inside ceased. Possemen crept up cautiously, entered the house and discovered the three bodies.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—A vigorous investigation of the spectacular dash for liberty by six convicts at Leavenworth Federal Prison was launched today by the department of justice.

Sanford Bates, superintendent of prisons, or one of his representatives, planned to leave at once for Leavenworth to probe the situation. The government authorities were particularly anxious to learn the ramifications of the plot, and to determine the identity of persons outside of the prison who assisted the convicts.

COURT RULING HALTS WORK ON PRESENT BASIS

considerable length, Judge Gowdy gave this opinion:

"It follows that the use of material other than common brick in the load bearing walls should be enjoined; that the use of bar joists with a bearing of less than six inches on the wall should be enjoined; and that the anchoring of the bar joists in any other way than that specified in the detailed drawing of two five-eighths inch bolts running into the walls to a depth of ten inches should be enjoined; and the construction of the wall referred to above with any overhang on the footing wall should be enjoined. And the decree may be drawn accordingly."

The plaintiff in the taxpayer's suit charged, among other things, that the construction being installed by the contractor is much cheaper than the type called for in the contract, and would result in a large saving to the firm in the cost of construction.

In so far as the question of cost is concerned, and as to whether the changes from the plans and specifications cheapen the construction, or whether the construction as being installed results in a loss to the taxpayers of the district, is not a matter within the jurisdiction or control of the courts by injunction, Judge Gowdy asserted.

"The electors of the district selected the board of education, and so far as the questions of expenditure of the money in construction of this building are involved, they rest entirely with the board of education," Judge Gowdy advised. "The board, in the management of the affairs of building this school building, exercises its own discretion in the matter and is not answerable to or controlled by the courts," Judge Gowdy declared.

There is, also, involved in the case the question of the safety of the construction being installed, and that is a question over which the court has jurisdiction, in fact, the "only" question considered by him, Judge Gowdy declared. "The laws of Ohio make the education of children within the school age compulsory upon the parents, and when this building is completed and the other schools in the school district discontinued, the parents of the children of school age are compelled by law to send their children to school in this building."

"Consequently, the plaintiff in this case, or anyone whose children would have to go to the school, or any taxpayer, has the right by reason of that fact to have the building constructed with the degree of safety that is required by the state building code, and, also, to have it constructed with the degree of safety that the plans and specifications and contract call for."

The opinion takes exception to the testimony of one expert witness of the defense to the effect that the anchorage furnished by the contractor as a substitute for the anchorage as designated in the plans and specifications was safe.

"One expert witness, Frank Burton, in giving his testimony in that matter, clearly demonstrated that the anchorage put in was not nearly as strong as that called for," Judge Gowdy asserted.

"After testifying that the anchorage put in by the contractor was safe, and as good as the method specified, he said that he regarded it as better; and when asked his reason, stated that the anchorage specified on the drawings was excessive, and that if the floor collapsed it would tear the wall down and do that much more damage."

"The purpose of the anchorage is to keep the floor from collapsing. When you keep in mind that when this building is in use, all the rooms will be full of children; that this floor to be supported by these bar joists carries a load of 2,600 pounds for each two lineal feet; and that the rooms are twenty-three feet wide, it necessarily follows the children who would be in this room under this floor would have little, if any, chance to get out of the room alive if a floor of this weight should collapse and fall."

"While a few dollars would patch the hole in the walls that might be torn out by the extra strength of the anchorage, nothing would replace the lives of the children who would be killed if the floor, by reason of the weakening of the anchorage, collapsed."

The opinion cites other particulars where the construction being put in does not comply, allegedly, with the degree of safety called for in the contract. Judge Gowdy's decree elaborates upon and discusses in detail three principal claims in the petition which constitute the main contention between parties to the case: first, that the concrete work was not constructed in accordance with the plans; second, that material used in constructing load bearing walls was not as required; and third, that the bar joists, both as to the amount of bearing the ends of the joists have on the walls, and also, the method of anchoring the bar joists to the wall, were not as specified.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the shadow of a cloud; the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.—Isaiah, xxv, 5.

CABINET PERSONNEL

One of the points most eagerly discussed in certain sections of the press concerning the personnel of the new British Cabinet has been the average age of its members, and some dissatisfaction has been expressed with the fact that this average is slightly higher than that of the Labor Cabinet of 1924.

This attitude is one of the manifestations of the demand for more youth in politics which has been so insistent in Britain for some time. One feels that perhaps this demand has been overdone. The essential meaning implied, of course, is irreproachable. At bottom it is a call for courage, vision, and initiative. But some unfortunate phraseology has been woven into it, obscuring the fact that these qualities may just as possibly be found in mature men as in striplings.

Experience is not everything, but it hardly should be regarded as a disqualification. The setting of an arbitrary term to men's activities is a policy often confuted by facts. It is significant that in the Labor Government one of the ministers who gave an unforgettable impression of freshness, brightness, and youthful enthusiasm was Mr. George Lansbury, in years one of the oldest.

As a matter of fact, number of years as a criterion of capacity for rendering public service has been proved practically useless. William Pitt at twenty-odd was widely recognized as a perfectly efficient Prime Minister; so was Gladstone at more than eighty. Energy, originality, courage have more in their favor than age or youth as standards by which to judge men's abilities.

The old saying that the worst of our troubles never happen continues true.

The country is now taking up the White Man's burden once more—Congress.

And didn't it give you a nice pleasant feeling to go shopping and josten up a bit? Try it again.

Japan is demonstrating in Manchuria the enduring nature of the old saying that "Might makes right."

Charlie Chaplin's experience in an English court probably didn't appeal much to his sense of humor.

On the whole, Prince Nicholas ought to be rather glad to get out of Rumania and away from Big Brother Carol.

With Congress convening, the country asks it to provide relief. When Congress adjourns the country will get what it is asking.

If you can't laugh at a joke, don't think that your sense of humor must be fading. The trouble probably is with the sense of the humorist.

FARM LEGISLATION

Unusually vigorous efforts will be made by organized farm groups to induce the present session of congress to pass legislation intended to produce more favorable conditions for agriculture in this country. Various organizations and individuals may hold different and opposing views as to the nature of satisfactory legislation. Some of them must be mistaken and all may be, more or less so. The important thing is not whether the advocates of this or that form of legislation are right or wrong, but recognition of the justice, desirability and importance to the general welfare of legislation of this type.

The justice of legislation designed for the special benefit of agriculture arises from two factors, first the basic character of, and large number of persons and amount of natural resources involved in, the industry and second the fact that the industry, in spite of its vast size, almost universal distribution, and fundamental importance, is carried on through small, individual units, that it is at a decided disadvantage in buying, in selling, in regulating production in accordance with the market and in dealing with factors of competition.

There is no other industry in which the hours are so long and no other industry which produces so much per unit of labor, figured not in dollars and cents, which would be unfair because of the chronic depression of farm prices, but in units of satisfying human needs. But the farmer is so unfavorably placed industrially that it often happens that the harder he works and the more expert intelligence he devotes to his work, the lower his returns because the resulting increased production means a decreased price.

The farmer, as an individual, must always both buy and sell at the other man's price. If he is not satisfied his alternative is to keep his own products or to do without those of others. Any legislation which will correct this unfavorable condition is justifiable legislation and legislation for the general benefit. — Springfield Sun.

Policy Of Bankers Criticised

BY A. S. DEWING

Professor, Harvard School of Business Administration

(Arthur Stone Dewing was born in Boston, Mass., April 16, 1880. He is a graduate of Harvard, and has received numerous honorary degrees. He was named assistant in philosophy at Harvard in 1902, and became instructor in economics in 1911. In 1922 he was made associate professor of finance, and became professor in 1927. He is president of Rockingham, Mass., National bank, and many other organizations. Dewing is the author of numerous books, some of which are, "Life as Reality," "Financial Policy of Corporations," and "Promotion and Reorganization of Industrial Organizations.")

The policy of investment bankers in handling large issues of foreign bonds during the last boom when they knew little of conditions abroad, I criticize greatly.

During a boom the investment banker is one of the "chief devils" in the trend of industry and finance toward the depression that always follows inflation.

Referring to the large foreign loans placed by investment bankers between 1924 and 1929, the tragedy is how little the bankers knew of the conditions in these nations. As a group they had absolutely no knowledge of conditions, but they bought the bonds because they were offered at a considerable profit to them and could be reasonably distributed.

The general feeling among banks and among average citizens in the last boom was that the Federal Reserve system had discovered a way of creating credit. The banks were entirely too liberal during the boom and they would not have been so but for the Federal Reserve.

It is very bad for bankers to sell securities; banking is one function, and selling securities is another.

Within a few years there will be a rigid divorce of the two functions. As correctives I suggest more rigid examination of banks by more highly trained bank examiners and the holding down of public expenditures. I doubt that commodity prices will continue to fall.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Commuting is a habit gradually formed, long nurtured and difficult to break. Your confirmed commuter, finding himself by a freak of fate living next door to his job, would walk around the block several times each morning before punching the clock.

After careful study and the consultation of many heavy volumes, I have reached the conclusion that the commuting instinct is dormant in many men. A year or two in New York will always bring it to full flower.

Nothing is more vain than trying to point out to one of these "remote control" friends that he spends an appalling percentage of his waking hours on a train, ferry or subway seat. For example, an acquaintance of mine who owns a house so far upstate he must arise at half after five in the morning in order to get to the office on time, spends two hours and a half daily in transit or in waiting rooms.

This amounts to 60 hours, roughly, or about ten working days a month. In a year he has consumed at least a third of his entire business time in the process of being carted back and forth to work. And he like it.

Low rents, fresh air and play space for the kiddies, plenty of room and rooms, have been advanced by the commuting fraternity. I suspect it is something else—the feeling, at the end of each working day, that a long journey lies ahead; a journey away from all the defeats, irritations and overwhelming monotony of the job in which he must pretend to be interested all his life long.

And that is justification enough.

STATESMAN

Ann Lord, of Oklahoma City, writes: "I don't know how you've gotten along without taking notice of 'Alfalfa Bill' Murray. . . . All that is needed for a Murray-for-president headquarters is a vacant telephone booth, one in each state.

"He plays a good hand at bridge. "He can't whistle, but can make clever sounds drinking both coffee and soup. He boils 'em in oil and makes 'em like it."

APPROACH

The famous producer of revues whose parties are elaborate and spectacular, wanted to throw a soiree which would last until far past dawn. And he wanted the roster of the town's most imposing names to be his guest list.

Nothing if not ingenious, the host called the wives of all the noted men he sought for his soiree and said:

"Good morning, madam. Will you be a good sport and let me have your husband for one night? This is a rather unusual party and can only be held with the consent and tolerance of ladies like yourself. I promise you your husband will return to you not later than 9 o'clock of the day following. Are you game?"

Believe it or not, the party was well attended.

The coldest winter of which there is record was in the year 1709, when in Europe frost penetrated three yards in the ground and the Adriatic was frozen over, as was also the coast of the Mediterranean.

The heaviest snowfalls in the United States occur in the central portions of the Sierra Nevada of California.

FIZZLE OF "HUNGER MARCH" SEEN AS PROVING FAILURE OF COMMUNISTS

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—What Washington's recent hunger demonstration really demonstrated was that there practically is no revolutionary sentiment in this country, despite the depression.

The tourists—as they traveled by truck they can hardly be called marchers—came from as many directions and as far away as Maine, Seattle, the southwest and down in Dixie to Atlanta and Birmingham. If much genuinely belligerent radicalism existed within these wide limits the hunger trek surely would have swept appreciable evidences of it into the capital.

The demonstration was a fizzle for various reasons, but principally from lack of sincerity.

I have seen several revolutionary demonstration which proved that they actually were revolutionary by effecting revolutions—in Constantinople and Lisbon, for example. Also, the unsuccessful one in Buenos Aires in 1919, during which the crowd repeatedly charged the government's machine guns for three days, until nearly 1,000 were killed before the failure of the attempt was admitted.

It is easy enough to recognize at a glance the difference between such a demonstration as any of those and the affair staged in the capitol plaza here the day congress convened.

Washington's demonstrators were dead tired. It was cold, too, and they shivered. There was no spirit there. Both in voice and in gesture they responded listlessly to the encouragement of their cheer leaders.

Their leaders themselves were at a loss for a generalissimo.

They needed a Jack Cade or a Wat Tyler, and none materialized.

Nevertheless, the demonstration was not without its danger. Not quite all the tourists were of the tamest of the average. A few among them undoubtedly wanted to see a false move by the local authorities might easily have furnished them with the opportunity to start it and precipitate a bloody clash at an instant's notice.

In this respect the capitol was exceedingly lucky in its new police chief, Brigadier General Pelham D. Glasford, whose handling of the situation could scarcely have been improved on.

The White House and justice department, convinced that a serious communistic outbreak was threatened, were desirous of a formidable turnout of troops from Fort Meyer, the summoning of a body of marines from Quantico and even the bringing of blue jackets from Norfolk.

These suggestions, the general vetoed relentlessly.

Vice President Curtis also sought to bar the appearance of the tourists' banners from the capitol grounds, and likewise was overruled by the police head.

Senator Tasker L. Oddie and Representative Hamilton Fish added to the commotion by declaring themselves in personal danger and demanding protection, which was accorded to them, but so unostentatiously that little attention was attracted.

The visitors were entitled, the general insisted, to present their petitions and to treatment like any other sojourners in the capital.

By acting as their personal motorcycle escort on their parades about the city, he contrived to protect them as effectively from attack as to keep a strict watch on their own activities. Pistols not only were ordered holstered, but with holster flaps buttoned.

How To Fight Skin Disease

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EVERY YEAR at this time I begin to receive letters asking for advice concerning the skin disease, psoriasis. Most patients find that their troubles become much better in the summer and then break out again in the winter.

The experience of every one of these patients is about the same—that it is a stubborn disease, and while it responds fairly well to treatment, it has an invariable tendency to come back.

The eruption comes out in patches of dry, scaling inflammation of the skin surface. It is particularly likely to attack the back, the front of the legs, the back of the arms, and the scalp and the ears.

So far as cause is concerned, nothing definite is known, except that it seems to attack certain people. It is not in any way contagious.

Nothing arouses more natural sympathy than the plight of these poor patients. It is one of the most annoying things that can fall to the lot of a human creature. It is, of course, not fatal or dangerous, but belongs with those minor afflictions like sinus disease of the nose, asthma, hay fever and slight deafness, which while they do not in most cases seriously affect the person's health, still remain a real cross to bear.

Treatment can do much to mitigate the worst of the discomfort, but for real cure there is little hope. The number of methods of treatment that have been proposed are evidence of the fact that no one method is certain of relief. In some cases, however, treatment will banish the disease for a number of years.

Much can be done by a careful regulation of the life and diet. As one patient told me, it just depends on not doing anything that gives you a good time. Early to bed, frequent warm bathing to remove the scales, keeping elimination open, the avoidance of alcoholic beverages, and a bland diet, avoiding red meat and highly spiced foods, tend to keep the worst of the trouble within bounds.

Light treatments have been used and in some patients work wonders. The X-ray must be used with caution, but in competent and careful hands it has great value. The latest treatment to be recommended is the ultra-violet ray, which has a good record of success in some cases; no one can tell beforehand which patients will be benefited, so if any patient has not tried it, it is worth while making the attempt. A combination of drugs, ultra-violet light, and carefully applied X-ray afterwards, is perhaps the best means the dermatologist has to offer at present.

The use of vaccines and proteins has also given splendid results in some cases.

Girl Being Forced To Marry

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

Is this, 1931 or not? When I received this letter, I rubbed my eyes and wondered if I'd dreamed that I was living in modern times, when women vote and everything. If this letter is bona fide it's proof that some people still are thinking in the past, when marriages were "arranged" by parents and the daughter had nothing to say about who her husband was to be.

"My Dear Miss Lee: My problem, I think, is quite unusual and oh, Miss Lee, so important to me! In the first place, I am only 16 and a junior in high school. I had been enjoying myself in the usual way until Daddy brought home a man of about 30 years of age. He began to be very attentive to me after our second meeting, and I naturally resented it. He said I was a cute kid. Then suddenly he told me he had dad's consent for our marriage. I thought he was joking for awhile until he started to get mushy, and I left him.

"I spoke to mother about it. She congratulated me, told me how lucky I was, etc. I objected, naturally, but mom said dad was nearly forcing me to marry him.

"I have discovered the reason. He is very wealthy and the Junior partner of the firm under which dad works, and dad has hopes that his son-in-law might be of use.

"Miss Lee, I love my parents. I would like to see dad established comfortably in a wealthy firm, but I should I sacrifice my whole life to give us all a little money? I have no desire to stop school. I want to go to college, and above all, I don't want to marry HIM! Layola."

Surely you're dreaming this problem, Layola. You don't expect me to believe that melodramatic yarn, do you? It sounds just like one of the old days in which the beautiful heroine sacrificed ALL to save the old homestead. Only in that case the gallant hero always galloped home from "turrin" parts with a fortune just at the crucial moment and snatched the gal from the villain.

If yours is a bona fide story, absolutely refuse to marry this man, no matter what your parents say.

Appeal to other relatives or to old friends of the family—your minister, or anyone who might have influence with them. You had better lose all you have than be married to a man who is abhorrent to you, especially as you are far too young to think of marrying at all.

I can't believe any modern parents can for a moment contemplate such a proposition.

A PAL: Yours is the old story. Pal. Schoolyard sweethearts, and one has childhood. It is perfectly natural for the girl friend to decide she doesn't love you as much as she once thought she did and to want some other boy friend, and of course it is hard on you, who still love her.

Your one hope is that she may decide this new chap is not to her liking and want you back. Keep on going out with other girls and occasionally ask her for a date. This will keep you from brooding over the matter too much, and you will probably know if she changes and returns to her regard for you.

Use Massage On Wave

—By GLADYS GLAD—

"We beauty specialists practically always insist that our clients give their tresses the standard 50 to 100 brush strokes every night. And it is not only because this brushing cleanses the hair and gives it gloss and luster that we insist upon it. There's a more important reason than that, said reason being that brushing stimulates the circulation in the scalp and enables the blood to carry nourishment to the hair.

A good many girls, however, are loath to give their hair this necessary brushing. Suppose, for instance, that a girl is preparing for a big date with the boy friend. She goes to her beauty shop the day before the big event and has her hair marcelled, or has permanent wave set. She knows that all the stiffness of that wave—whether a rest permanent or a marcel—will be gone in 24 hours, and that her hair will then be at its prettiest. And she is so anxious that her wave be absolutely perfect, that she is even afraid to touch her hair, no less use a brush on it.

It is the fear of ruining a wave that makes the majority of females neglect their nightly brushings. But correct brushing with a flexible-bristled brush will not actually take a good wave out of the hair. It may soften the wave somewhat, but will at the same time polish the hair and help to bring out the full loveliness of the wave.

If, however, you really are afraid that brushing will have a detrimental effect on your wave, you must provide your scalp with stimulation in another manner. And that is by massage. For a scalp massage can be safely administered without any danger of its proving ruinous to a wave. Simply place your fingers firmly on your scalp with the thumbs toward the back, the fingers of each hand spread over the head. Then to massage the scalp with the fingers, moving the scalp over the skull in slow, rhythmic circles.

Continue this massaging occasionally shifting your fingers until you have treated the entire scalp. Such massaging will give the circulation in your scalp the stimulation it needs and will not have a ruinous effect on your wave.

CENTRAL WINS OVER WAYNESVILLE HIGH IN NARROW CONTEST

Score 11 To 9 In Last Quarter Effort;
Juniors Win

Our team may not have been as "red hot" as some of the lads and lassies in the gallery were chanting, but it revealed better than fair to middlin' possibilities in its season's premier showing Friday night at Central High gymnasium.

In an economical scoring basketball game, Xenia Central High's latest court quintet passed and plunged its way to a last-quarter 11 to 9 triumph over little Waynesville High, 1931 champions of Warren County, annual "trial horse" for the Buccaneers in their court campaign debut.

Exhibiting superior passwork and floor work, but a mile less lucky than the Bucs in their basket shooting, Waynesville, deprived of the services of three regulars who have the mumps, was in the lead until the last five minutes of play, when a basket by Howard Thompson squared the count and Jimmie Ralls, delivered the winning field-goal.

It is a tribute to the Buccaneer defense that the Warren County quintet was held scoreless in the second half and that it tallied only two points in the last three quarters combined. At that, it was not until the middle of the fourth period that Xenia cagers overtook their opponents. Waynesville was ahead, 7 to 4, in the first quarter, 9 to 6 at the half and 9 to 7 at the third period ended.

Loose guarding by the Bucs enabled Waynesville to declare dividends on a number of close-in shots in the opening period, but thereafter there could be no criticism of Xenia's defense.

Waynesville inaugurated the point-guarding at a basket by Savage. Paul Baldwin retaliated with a fielder for Xenia. Baskets by Davis and Savage put the visitors out in front by four points, but this margin was cut in half by Ralls' two-pointers. Ellis contributed a free throw for Waynesville as the quarter closed.

Thompson's field goal for the Bucs after Savage had added another basket for the visitors completed the entire second period scoring. Converting a free throw, Carl Smith, Xenia forward, had the honor of making the only point produced in the third quarter. The final stanza, a rough and tumble affair, as final stanzas so often are, saw both teams working themselves into a frenzy. Out of the turmoil came Thompson's ringer that evening the score at last, and Xenia's winning basket, while Waynesville sought vainly to hit the elusive hoop.

Each team had an almost equal number of shots, Xenia taking twenty-six and Waynesville attempting twenty-seven. The Bucs tried only five from long range and twenty-one inside the foul line, while the Warren team had eighteen short attempts and nine from longer distances.

To quote a popular phrase, one little raindrop doesn't make a shower, neither does one basketball game make or break a season, but at first blush the play of the Buccaneers, while it lacked polish and uncovered other glaring faults, still gives rise to the hope another well-balanced Xenia court team is in the making.

The Xenia team, with three regulars from last season gone and a fourth regular, Freddie Dalton, temporarily incapacitated with an injury, is, of course, in the experimental stage, but Coach Wilson has some promising boys, providing they keep their promise. Paul Baldwin and Carl Smith, at forwards, served notice they intend to develop into real assets to the team. Baldwin is especially fast and a quick thinker, while Carl's floor game was good. David Short and "Mo" Hyman, alternated at center, were about on a par with the other two. Hyman is a good defender, but it is hoped one of the other will show a little improvement from an offensive standpoint. Howard Thompson, lone veteran handles his guard position efficiently, while Jimmie Ralls is capable at the other guard. Dick Creamer and Latimer may also prove of invaluable assistance as forwards.

In the preliminary, Central's junior high team set the Bucs a good example by conquering Waynesville juniors, 14 to 9. Pat's boys gave a smooth exhibition, particularly McCartney at guard, who tallied five points. Malavazos, also scoring five points, looked good at center and Batson at the other guard. Lineups:

Ohio State Stars To Address Football Groups Here

Two of the outstanding members of Ohio State University's 1931 football team—Bob Haubrich and Lew Hinchman—will be guest speakers at separate banquets in Xenia next week honoring Xenia

Central High School and the O. S. and S. O. Home football squads. Haubrich, star tackle, recently was chosen as the most valuable man to the Buckeye football team, the selection being made by members of the varsity squad, will speak Tuesday noon at the Elks' Club when the Buccaneer gridders, following an annual custom, will be dinner guests of the Rotary Club. Hinchman, captain-elect of the 1932 Ohio State team, who played a halfback position this season, has been obtained as the speaker Thursday night at a banquet at the O. S. and S. O. Home for the cadet football players.

Consent of both Ohio State players to appear in this city for the scheduled talks were procured by Capt. Harold L. Hays, superintendent of the O. S. and S. O. Home, who knows them personally. Both players formerly were members of an Ohio National Guard company at Columbus at a time when Capt. Hays was serving as a lieutenant in the same company. Haubrich has been mentioned for a berth on several of the mythical all-star Western Conference football elevens this fall. Selected as the most valuable man to the team during the season, he is Ohio State's candidate for the annual Chicago Tribune award to the most valuable football player in Big Ten competition. Wesley "All-American" Fessler, the great Ohio State star, won the Tribune award in his senior year in 1931. Haubrich, a graduate of North High in Columbus, is a son of Col. Robert Haubrich, commander of the now famous 166th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, a part of the Rainbow Division during the World War. Upon graduation in June he will enter Duke University to prepare himself for the career he desires—that of an army surgeon. He is leaving for California next week, having been invited and having accepted an invitation to play in the annual East-West all-star football game for charity.

Lew Hinchman, who will be heard by the Home cadets, is also one of Ohio State's most prominent athletes. Not only is he a great football player but he was also a regular on State's basketball team last season.

REWARD ATHLETES

FIFTEEN members of Xenia Central High's 1931 football squad and the senior manager received their rewards when Coach Walter C. "Pinky" Wilson distributed letters at a student assembly Friday afternoon.

H. G. Patterson, junior high coach, also passed out letters to sixteen members of his "Little Buccaneer" grid squad, the combined eighth grade-freshman team.

During the game exercises, Oscar Fulkerson, a junior, was awarded a prize for having sold the largest number of tickets for the musical presentation of the joint boys' and girls' glee clubs, the school orchestra and band, last week.

Three Harmonizers Make "Hit" In WLW Broadcast

By MILDRED MASON

THREE interesting chaps who have recently been added to the staff of WLW, Cincinnati, and who are making a tremendous "hit", are the "Three Brown Bears".

Members of the vocal trio are Carl Brown, Lewis Wagner, George Strayer, all of Springfield. They are heard in the "Plantation Days" broadcast Wednesday afternoons at 3:30 o'clock and again on Sunday at 12:30 p. m.; with the "Doodiesocks" Saturday nights at 11:30 o'clock and on the WLW "Variety" programs on Sundays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

It was by chance that the three formed the group which is now proving so popular. Brown suffered an attack of typhoid fever two years ago and during the convalescence Wagner and Strayer visited him daily at the hospital. One day they decided to try a bit of "close harmony" and even surprised themselves with the results. The next day Strayer brought along his guitar and the three settled down to a real workout. Several months ago they signed a contract with WLW and are now featured as "The Three Brown Bears" and the "Three Musketeers".

To Discuss Taxes.

Ex-Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., of New York, will inaugurate a series of programs intended to make the nation tax conscious when he speaks over an NBC network Monday at 6:15 p. m. on the aims and history of the American Taxpayers League. His subject will be "Centralization". Station WLW, Cincinnati, will broadcast the program.

"Didn't like the fellow, after all," was Arlene's excuse as she came wandering in about nine o'clock just when Lois had begun to tell Margaret about her new place. It spoiled everything momentarily, but Lois did not feel the same toward Arlene as she used to do. She disliked her, of course, but she wasn't jealous of her any longer. She had no reason to be.

"Oh, hello, Lois," Arlene tossed her head on the writing desk and fell into the easy chair. "I didn't know we were to have the honor of your distinguished company this evening or I wouldn't have gone out at all."

Lois would not be sarcastic. She wouldn't have said anything at all to Arlene if Arlene had not first attacked her.

"I wouldn't have come if I had thought you were going to be here," she returned.

"Friends again," Arlene said, turning up her lip, "but of course, I don't blame you for being in a bad humor. I would be too, if I had just been given the air."

"Thanks for forming me of it," Lois responded. "I haven't noticed it especially."

Arlene did not know, of course, that the engagement which was announced in the paper was false.

"Everything that's in the paper isn't always true," Margaret said. "May I inform you that Bruce Durand is going to marry Lois Corbin and that he already has rented the apartment where they're going to live?"

Arlene didn't say anything. That news was a little too much for her to cope with on the spur of the moment. Margaret had also told her that Lois had been promoted to the position of secretary. This was still ranking Arlene.

"Go on, Lois," Margaret said consolingly, "don't pay any attention to Arlene. She's jealous that's all."

Arlene smiled contemptuously, "Jealous of what, I'd like to know. I'm not jealous of either one of you if that's what you mean."

"You may not be jealous now," Margaret retorted, "but there was a time when you certainly were green with envy of Lois. Anyway, you tried your damndest to get Bruce without success."

Arlene was getting a little warm. Margaret certainly could make things uncomfortable for her when she felt like it. And there wasn't anything one could say back to Margaret in order to squelch her. Arlene rose and put on her hat.

"Well," she said haughtily, "if I have to run out of my own apartment, I suppose it's all right. I'll come back after you leave, Lois."

Lois didn't answer. Arlene banged the door hard behind her.

Lois and Margaret laughed after she had gone.

"You shouldn't get yourself into trouble by sticking up for me," Lois warned Margaret.

Margaret tossed her head flipantly. "Don't be silly," she said, "I don't get myself in trouble. Arlene never says a word to me when we're alone about the way I talk to her. I merely give her back what she hands out. Forget it. Go on, tell me about the apartment. I'm dying to hear about it."

Lois continued. She told Margaret everything, from the cunning scarf that was on her dressing table to the bright blue enameled pans that were in the kitchen.

"Do they furnish all those things?" Margaret asked her skeptically.

"Yes, it's a furnished apartment. They furnish everything."

"It sounds funny to me," Margaret said. "I never saw a furnished apartment that had all the gew-gaws in it that you say this one has."

Lois was sure, she told her that they were all alike. But she observed the next time she went down there with Bruce to look at it that they weren't all alike. One of the doors happened to be open and she saw some shabby furniture inside the apartment. Well, it wasn't exactly shabby, but it was shabby compared to the nice new things that were in her own.

She asked Bruce about it and he grinned sheepishly.

"All that furniture is ours, honey," he said proudly, "every piece of it. I didn't want to tell you because I was afraid you would think I had spent my money foolishly."

Lois stopped on the stairway and hugged him.

"You're a darling," she exclaimed. "You're a darling," she exclaimed. "I love it so, having everything so nice and new. I'll be just like our marriage."

Bruce had experienced some compunction over having purchased so much furniture. His bank account was nothing to brag about. But he was happy he had done so when he saw how happy it made Lois.

"We won't need to have a honeymoon," Lois told him. "We can save the money from that. I'd be contented just to move right in here the very day we are married."

"Yes, we will have a honeymoon," Bruce insisted. "I refuse to be cut out of that. You can only have one and I mean to have it. It's going to be a big event in my life."

Lois smiled. "You're such a dear," she told him. "She had a feeling of security as he took her in his arms. As if nothing could part them, she felt."

CHAPTER 54

"IT HAD cretine drapes, the same material that is used for the pillows and even one of the lamp shades. It's the cutest place you ever saw in your life."

Lois was at Margaret's apartment telling her of the place that Bruce had rented on Delaware street which he termed as "The Durand Mansion." Arlene also, was there. Lois wouldn't have come over had she known Arlene would be there, but Margaret had assured her that Arlene had gone out for the evening.

"Didn't like the fellow, after all," was Arlene's excuse as she came wandering in about nine o'clock just when Lois had begun to tell Margaret about her new place. It spoiled everything momentarily, but Lois did not feel the same toward Arlene as she used to do. She disliked her, of course, but she wasn't jealous of her any longer. She had no reason to be.

Lois would not be sarcastic. She wouldn't have said anything at all to Arlene if Arlene had not first attacked her.

"I wouldn't have come if I had thought you were going to be here," she returned.

"Friends again," Arlene said, turning up her lip, "but of course, I don't blame you for being in a bad humor. I would be too, if I had just been given the air."

"Thanks for forming me of it," Lois responded. "I haven't noticed it especially."

Arlene did not know, of course, that the engagement which was announced in the paper was false.

"Everything that's in the paper isn't always true," Margaret said. "May I inform you that Bruce Durand is going to marry Lois Corbin and that he already has rented the apartment where they're going to live?"

Arlene didn't say anything. That news was a little too much for her to cope with on the spur of the moment. Margaret had also told her that Lois had been promoted to the position of secretary. This was still ranking Arlene.

"Go on, Lois," Margaret said consolingly, "don't pay any attention to Arlene. She's jealous that's all."

Arlene smiled contemptuously, "Jealous of what, I'd like to know. I'm not jealous of either one of you if that's what you mean."

"You may not be jealous now," Margaret retorted, "but there was a time when you certainly were green with envy of Lois. Anyway, you tried your damndest to get Bruce without success."

Arlene was getting a little warm. Margaret certainly could make things uncomfortable for her when she felt like it. And there wasn't anything one could say back to Margaret in order to squelch her. Arlene rose and put on her hat.

"Well," she said haughtily, "if I have to run out of my own apartment, I suppose it's all right. I'll come back after you leave, Lois."

Lois didn't answer. Arlene banged the door hard behind her.

Lois and Margaret laughed after she had gone.

"You shouldn't get yourself into trouble by sticking up for me," Lois warned Margaret.

Margaret tossed her head flipantly. "Don't be silly," she said, "I don't get myself in trouble. Arlene never says a word to me when we're alone about the way I talk to her. I merely give her back what she hands out. Forget it. Go on, tell me about the apartment. I'm dying to hear about it."

Lois continued. She told Margaret everything, from the cunning scarf that was on her dressing table to the bright blue enameled pans that were in the kitchen.

"Do they furnish all those things?" Margaret asked her skeptically.

"Yes, it's a furnished apartment. They furnish everything."

"It sounds funny to me," Margaret said. "I never saw a furnished apartment that had all the gew-gaws in it that you say this one has."

Lois was sure, she told her that they were all alike. But she observed the next time she went down there with Bruce to look at it that they weren't all alike. One of the doors happened to be open and she saw some shabby furniture inside the apartment. Well, it wasn't exactly shabby, but

HUSBAND SUES FOR DIVORCE; TENANT IS SUED; COURT NEWS

That his wife married him through no feeling of affection but only in order that she might acquire the status as a widow or wife of a World War veteran is the complaint made by Clarence Washington, 315 S. Columbus St., in a suit for divorce from Nannie Alberta Washington, 539 E. Main St., on file in Common Pleas Court. Washington, charging gross neglect of duty, declares his wife has refused to live with him since their marriage last June 3 at Troy, and that she won't even use his name. The plaintiff discloses he is a veteran of the late war, drawing a pension for disability, and that after his marriage, he gave his wife almost the entire amount of his government bonus.

SUES TENANT

Alleging $300 is due and unpaid in rental from the defendant, tenant on a farm in Cedarville Twp. which the plaintiff claims to have purchased some time ago, John H. Clay has brought an injunction suit in Common Pleas Court against Ralph Kennedy to prevent possible disposal of growing crops on the farm.

The petition asserts Kennedy leased the farm originally from Sarah C. B. Scarborough for a period from March 1, 1930 to March 1, 1932, agreeing to pay $350 a year. Clay sets forth he bought the farm, subject to the lease, giving the tenant personal notice at the time the transfer of ownership was made. By terms of the contract, a lien is reserved on growing crops. It is claimed, C. W. Whitmer is the plaintiff's attorney.

FRAUD ALLEGED IN SUIT

Suit seeking to have a real estate conveyance set aside and the property held in trust for the benefit of creditors has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Melville McDonald, otherwise known as Melvin McDonald, against Amy E. McDonald and Pearl Huston, the plaintiff claiming fraud.

McDonald charges there is due him from Amy McDonald, $970.34, plus interest, less a $148 credit, on a promissory note, and that she sold real estate she owns in Xenia in order to delay and hinder payment of the obligation. It is claimed the property conveyance was made to Pearl Huston, a daughter of Amy McDonald, Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

APPEAL FILED

Appeal from a decision of John T. Hornaday, Miami Twp. Justice of the peace, favorable to C. A. Wallace, Yellow Springs, has been taken to Common Pleas Court by Phillip Diehl, Yellow Springs. Diehl sued Wallace in the magistrate's court for $7.42, claimed to be due for groceries and meats, but the defendant was granted a judgment on his counterclaim of $7.50 due for labor and materials furnished.

PARTITION REQUESTED

Partition of 5.45 acres of real estate situated in Cedarville Twp. is asked in a suit brought in Common Pleas Court by Kate Setz against Mary Haley, Elizabeth Butt, John J. Haley, Tim Haley, William Haley and M. C. Nagley, as administrator of the estate of James Haley. Sale of the property is sought in the event partition is denied. Miller and Finney are the plaintiffs' attorneys.

ILLUSTRATED BIBLE LESSON

John's Vision on Patmos

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell
And Alfred J. Buescher

REVELATION 1:4-18: The "Revelation" or "Apocalypse" is Christ's own "Unveiling," as the word means, of "things which must shortly come to pass." The key to the book is found in chapter one, verse nineteen: "Write therefore the things which thou sawest, and the things which are and the things which will come to pass hereafter." So John, exiled to the Isle of Patmos, wrote of the things he saw and heard from Christ himself in his vision on the isle.

"And I turned to see the voice that spake with me," wrote John. "And having turned I saw seven golden candlesticks; and in the midst of the candlesticks one like unto a Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot. . . . His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire. And his feet like unto fine brass. And he had in his right hand seven stars. . . . and his countenance was as the sun shining in his strength."

"And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last. I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, and have the keys of hell and of death. The seven stars, which thou sawest in my right hand, are the angels of the seven churches, and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches."

"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty."

WILBERFORCE

Mrs. James Byrd entertained the Mite Missionary Society at her residence Monday evening at which time an interesting program was given by the society. Special stress was laid on the work of home and foreign missions. Mrs. Edna Woodson read an article from the Western Christian Recorder, written by Bishop John A. Gregg, giving an account of the death of Rev. Francis McDonald Gow and Rev. Mangana Maake Mokane, both of whom were African Methodist ministers and lived in Cape Town, South Africa. It was through the influence of Charlotte Mayne, then a student at Wilberforce University, that Rev. Mokane and a group of ministers withdrew from the Wesleyan Church and organized the African Methodist Episcopal Church in South Africa. The work extended from Cape Town to Nyasaland and has a membership of over 20,000 people. In 1898 when Bishop H. M. Turner made a visit to South Africa, the Rev. Francis McDonald Gow united with the A. M. E. Church. Rev.
